1. The amplifier station is presumably located near the "Rausenische Berge" near Petersdorf in the vicinity of Bad Saarow. In addition to this temporary installation, two additional installations the exact locations of which could not yet be determined are said to be under construction.
2. Presumably, these installations belong to a project by which 10 installations are to be supplied with operational power from one end of the cables. This arrangement is similar to that already used for overseas cables with intermediate amplifiers equipped with tubes of a long durability. This arrangement almost guarantees the necessary power supply in the event of catastrophes or war. At present, the installation is presumably tested and will serve for most important purposes if it proves to be efficient.
